military rulers, moving to consoli-date their grip on power after the coup last weekend, named a nine-member, military-dominated cabinet on Tuesday. Troops continued to fight running street battles with pockets of anti-government protesters opposed to the new regime, according to news agency reports, Western diplomats and broadcasts on the official radio station.

Despite sporadic violence, the new government appears to have succeeded in stopping the massive pro-democracy demonstrations of the last aix weeks that had brought hundreds of thousands of people into the streets.

The opposition leader Daw Aung San Suu Kyi told a Washington Post reporter in Rangoon, "There is hope for a settlement, but quite frankly things should be set-tled across the negotiating table."

"The more people they slaugh-ter," she told the correspondent, Philip G. Smucker, "the less likely it is that we can reach an agreement."

Daw Aung San Suu Kyi and two other leading opposition leaders called for talks with General Saw Maung, the coup leader and armed forces chief of staff, in an effort to end the violence that on Monday claimed an estimated 400 or more lives.

Government radio reported an appeal by senior Buddhist monks that the new leaders and the opposition leaders "show a sense of triotism and meet face-to-face for talks."

A student leader, U Min Ko Naing, who heads the All-Burma Stadent Union, rejected the proposed dialogue and called instead for further violent action.

Stock Sales Proposed For Industries in China

By Daniel Southerland Washington Part Service BELIING — The head of the Chinese Communist party, Zhao Ziyang, proposed the sale of stock in state-owned enterprises in a ma-jor new effort to streamline inefficient industries, an official report said Tuesday. The proposal by Mr. Zhao to make share offerings on a large scale would mean fundamental changes in the system of ownership that exists in most Chinese enterprises. The proposal was reported in a front page article in People's Daily, the official newspaper. Mr. Zhao revealed the plan in a meeting Monday with Milton Friedman, the American economist. "This will be an extremely big reform of our state enterprises," Mr. Zheo was quoted as saying. The Economic Daily, another of-ficial newspaper, published a detailed account on Tuesday of why a shareholding system is needed in China to absorb consumer savings and increase production.

Mr. Zhao listed the proposed stock sales as one of three main projects he supports to modernize the Chinese economy. The other two, he said, are a reform of the pushed up retail prices, causing panic and anger among consumers. It will not be easy to establish a wide-ranging system of sharehold-ing in Chine. The first sales of stock only started in the country in recent years on an experimental basis. China has no central stock exchange. Because some veterans of the Communist Party still consider stockholding to be a tool of capital-ist exploitation, any move toward such equity holding will be controversial.

In an apparent effort to placate such critics, Mr. Zhao indicated the enterprises would remain at least technically owned by the state. But there is agreement among Chinese officials that something must be done to revive poorly managed industries.

Official statistics released in August said about 17 percent of the 6,000 most significant state-owned factories are unprofitable.

The State Statistics Bureau said the losses at those enterprises totaled about $1 billion in the first seven months of 1988, an increase of 27 percent over the same period last vear.

Economic Daily reported recently that government subsidies to state enterprises would reach 40 billion yuan ($10.8 billion) this year, which is almost half of total earnings of Chinese industries.

The shareholding proposal from Mr. Zhao is likely to be presented invational pricing system and a and discussed at an upcoming fight against high inflation that has meeting of the Communist Party

LOS ANGELES --- The single most impostant change since the summer in the state of the 1988 presidential contest is George Bush's success in wooing and bringing home

Bush's success in wooing and bringing home Ronald Reagan's supporters. Because Vice President Bush is now getting their backing and expecting their votes, Mi-chael S. Dukakis's single most important task, in turn, is to halt this process by getting Reagan supporters, who include many Dem-ocrats and independents, to think of Mr. Bush separately from President Reagan. The result is that despite two years of talk by Democrats about "the end of the Reagan era." the president remains a central force in era," the president remains a central force in the 1988 campaign. Because a majority - 55 percent - of the electorate now approves of him, both candidates must find arguments to win votes from his supporters.

Mr. Reagan is important, above all, because he has not only remained popular, but also has become more so as the year pro-gressed. With Reagan popularity rising, said Adam Goodman, a Republican consultant in Baltimore, Mr. Bush was able to transform the shape of his own campaign so that he appeared to be the best guarantee of a continuation of the "Reagan crusade - for economic growth and strength abroad." That, it seems, is how the voters see things. One of the most striking findings of the latest New York Times-CBS News Poll is that almost all of Mr. Bush's gains since August have come from Mr. Reagan's supporters. In two separate Times-CBS News Polls, in August and a week ago, the Republican presi-dential candidate went from being 16 points behind Mr. Dukakis to being eight points ahead. Other poils show the race between the two men closer, but the broad movement toward Mr. Bash since the summer has been recorded in all the polls.

In the August poli, the vice president was getting support from only 56 percent of those who approved of the way Mr. Reagan was handling his job. In the latest poll, Mr. Bush gets 75 percent of these voters.

In the same period, Mr. Dukakis's share of the pro-Reagan vote fell from 25 percent last month to 14 percent this month.

Among those who disapproved of Mr. Rea-gan, the contest changed much less, with most anti-Reagan voters in both polls going to Mr. Dukakis.

For many Democratic strategists, including some inside the Dukakis campaign, these numbers suggest that Mr. Dukakis, in the words of Mark Mellman, a Washingtonbased Democratic poll taker, "must sever the connection between George Bush and the things people like about the Reagan adminis-tration." Mr. Reagan's active campaigning on behalf of his vice president will make that goal harder to achieve.

But Democrats are developing a strategy designed to force Mr. Bush to pay at least some cost for his ties to Mr. Reagan. Part of the strategy is based on the fact that while Mr. Reagan is cancelly a strategy is based on the fact that while Mr. Reagan is generally popular, some of his administration's policies and actions are decidedly unpopular --- notably, the Iran-

Sudan Plans New Code of Islamic Law

By Blaine Harden

Washington Post Service NAIROBI — The Sudanese cab-inet, in an act likely to prolong and probably intensify one of Africa's most destructive civil wars, has approved a stringent new code of Is-lamic law denounced as unacceptable by Christian politicians in the divided country. Among the punishments spelled out in the criminal code are death by stoning for "the offense of adul-tery," 100 lashes with a whip and five years in prison for "the offense of homosexuality" and death for "the offense of apostasy," which is defined as "renunciation of the creed of Islam."

The key issue behind the civil war that has cut Sudan in half in the past five years, while spawning famine in the south, has been fear on the part of southern Christians that the Moslem-dominated north would insist that the country be governed hy Islamic law. Colonel John Garang, leader of the rebel Sudanese People's Liberation Army, which controls most of southern Sudan, has said that imposing Islamic law or sharia as part of the national criminal code is unacceptable. He also has said that his guerrilla movement, which is armed by Ethiopia, is prepared to fight for decades against any Suda-nese government that rejects a secular code of justice.

The strictest punishments spelled ont in the new law, such as crucifizion for armed robbers and amputation for petty thieves, would not apply in the Christian south, according to a note attached to the 1988 code.

But Taha Ibrahim, a Sudanese lawyer and respected scholar on sharia, said the punishments would apply to the estimated one million "internally displaced" southerners

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT BY THE AMBASSADOR ABOUT HIS RECENT MEETING AT THE FOREIGN OFFICE

The Ambassador of the Republic of Iraq wishes to give a clear account of his recent meeting at the Foreign Office and also to put in perspective the Iraqi position regarding the current events in the north of Iraq.

The Ambassador was called to the Foreign Office on 6th September. He was informed of the British Government's concern about reports of the alleged use of chemical weapons and of military action in northern Iraq which had led to large number of refugees crossing the border into Turkey.

The Ambassador gave a categorical danial that chemical weapons were being or had been used in the current military operations in Kurdistan. The reports arose from e malicious concerned campaign against Iraq. The Ambassador told tha Foreign Office that Iraq is taking action only against traitors who collaborated with the enemy against their own country and committed crimes against their own people.

The Ambassador expressed his dismay that the British Foreign Office should publicly involve itself with what was an internal matter for the Government of Iraq.

The Kurds live in Turkey, Iran, Syria, the Soviet Union and Iraq. Nowhere else are the Kurdish people and their culture given as much recognition and support as is the case in Iraq.

The autonomous region of Iraqi Kurdistan comprises tha three provinces in northern Iraq in which Kurds make up the majority of the population (Dohuk, Arbil and Sulaymaniya) has its own legislative and executive organs. Kurdish culture and traditions are accorded their fullest place and given special regard. Instruction in schools is in Kurdish, in autonomous region. There is a university in Arbil with a department devoted to Kurdish studies and to the furtherance of the Kurdish language and culture. There is a Kurdish Cultural Academy to preserve, develop and promote Kurdish culture. There are TV and radio stations broadcasting in Kurdish and newspapers and magazines in Kurdish.

Nowhere else do the Kurds, as a distinctive ethnic group of people, have such extensive opportunities for self-expression. Nowhere alse is there more encouragment and support of Kurdish culture, both by local bodies and by the official policy of the national state.

Among the large Kurdish population in Iraq there Is a very small number of Kurds who have been in rebellion ageinst the state of Iraq and its Government and people, and who have collaborated with its enemy and assisted Iranian forces in the invasion of Iraq. These traitors are not in the least representative of the Kurdish people of Iraq. Their ermed rebellion against the Government of Iraq is also directed ageinst the peace and productive life of their fellow Kurds.

The Iraqi Government has offered an amnesty to these Kurds if they wish to live in peace in their homeland, as it has done on previous occasions.

One of the basic duties of any Government is to ensure security and stability within the state. No Government can tolerate the continuation of an armed rebellion within the territory of the state. After the announcement of cease-fire, the leaders of the Kurdish armed rebellion in Iraq fled to Turkey with their families along with the civilian population they managed to drive before them. This was done an apparent effort to create e noisy campaign and to cover up their politicel bankruptcy and treason.

WASHINGTON (AP) --- Vice President George Bush and Governor Michael S. Dukakis will step forward to take questions in their first presidential debate Sunday, but it remains unclear who will be asking those questions. Mr. Dukakis, the Democratic candidate, proposed Monday that the news anchormen of the four commercial television networks be modera-tor and panelists, sources familiar with the negotiations said. Mr. Bush had his own list of four possible moderators and 10 questioners. The issue was still being debated by Bush and Dukakis aides as the Sunday date for the face-off at Wake Forest University in North Carolina drew closer. The first debate is sponsored by the parties' commission on debates. The second presidential debate, due Oct. 13 or Oct. 15 in Los Angeles, is sponsored by the League of Women Voters. sponsored by the League of Women Voters.

Mr. Zeller said the 1.6 million-member union had extended until Sept. 30 the deadline for the rank and file to return poll ballots on presidential preferences that were mailed to them three weeks ago.

The Teamsters were among three of the AFL-CIO's 91 affiliated unions that abstained last month from the labor federation's overwhelm-ing endorsement of the Democratic nominee, Michael S. Dukakis. Also telling the group he would name his running mate, Senator Lloyd Bettsen of Texas, to head a bipartisan energy summit meeting as soon after the election as possible, Mr. Dukakis said: "With each passing month, we are becoming more vulnerable to another oil embargo. At the ratik we're going, by 1995, the United States will be 60 percent dependent on foreign oil."

The energy supunit meeting is the second panel or commission to which Mr. Dukakis has said he would appoint the Texas senator if the Democratic ticket is elected. Mr. Dukakis has also said Mr. Bentsen with head a council on the space program, which, like oil, has a definite interest for Texas voters.

The polls in Texas show the Democrats trailing slightly in the race for the state's 29 electoral votes.

Too Tough on Iraq? No

It Is being suggested that the unanimous Senate vote on sanctions against Iraq is one of those well-intentioned but misguided gestures to which representative government, given to instant enthusiasms, is regrettably prone. No one contests the proposition that poison gas, which Iraq has been using against its Kurds, is terrible and that a strong stand against it is necessary to blunt the example of cost-free use. But, it is pointed out, Iraq is an important country in a region of broad American interests; the best way to proceed is in a context that will not raise Iraq's nationalist hackles and that will permit a balanced continuing relationship with that regional power. But surely this is to turn things on their head. The United States has reported "incontrovertible evidence" of "massive use" of gas against Kurdish guerrillas and civilians - use with a frequency, in a mode and on a scale suggesting something close to genocidal purpose. That constitutes an egregious violation of even the rubbery rules of war that oow prevail. In a world in which many things are murky, this one is clear. If gas is not to be considered beyond the limits, then there are no limits. Repeatedly in the past, the United States and other countries, acting on their own and through the United Nations, pleaded with Iraq and condemned its conduct of gas war-fare. Mindful of the strategic exigencies of the Iran-Iraq war, however, the protesters kept up their links with the Baghdad regime. Perhaps that was a mistake. Perhaps Iraq took their hesitation to move from words to deeds as a big wink. In any event, it is only now, in conditions of a cease-fire that af-fords many comforts to Iraq, and when it is using gas not against Iranian troops but against its own citizens, that the Senate has acted. It acted, moreover, not to spoil a relationship - one that was of tremendous value to Iraq in turning the ode of war --but to establish a more solid basis on which a relationship can continue now.

Iraq is not being asked to do anything that it should find onerous: only to stop the practice of a horrible, outlawed manner of war in a campaign against the Kurds in which it will still be able to press its overwhelming advantage. Some American offi-cials have let it be known they fear that this condition is unacceptable to Iraq. They are encouraging those in Baghdad who say: See, the Americans don't really care.

Next Steps for Turkey

Turkey took on the unaccustomed role of championing human rights when it opened its borders to 60,000 desperate Knrds fleeing Iraq's army and poisoo gas. This courageous action hy Prime Minister Turgut Ozal is sure to damage relations with Baghdad and spotlight Ankara's repression of Tarkey's own large Kurdish minority. But the rest of the world has taken positive notice. If Turkey now means to be more attentive to other human rights issues, its chances for admission into the European Community will surely be improved.

To be sure, Turkey has come a long way from its late 1970s lawlessness, its early 1980s military regime and the repression that until only recently kept Plato's "Republic" out of university classrooms. Fragile democracy is growing steadier. Yet charges of brutality by the police and torture in the prisons still dog Turkish authorities. And Turkish Kurds are, as ever, denied the most fundamental forms of self-expression, their language and culture outlawed. This last fact makes all the more notable

the granting of safe haven to the Iraqi Kurds

(after initial reports that Turkey had forcibly transferred some refugees to Iran). Turkey may have had little choice, confronted with desperate people arriving by the tens of thousands. Still, the response went beyond bare necessity, perhaps reflecting sensitivity to Western human rights concerns.

Western countries have taken notice. The Western countries have taken notice. The Turks have been commended in the U.S. Senate and praised by the Western diplomat-ic community in Ankara. Turkey, finding that it likes the approval, could stimulate more. Eagemess to get into the Community is already credited with spurring Turkish moves toward peace with Greece. Two other steps could also help. First, and most obvi-nistly it could look toward lifting its reporsously, it could look toward lifting its repres-sive hold on its own Kurds. Second, it might at last acknowledge the massacre 70 years ago of Armenians in Turkey, opening the way for an honest examination of Turkey's relations with its minorities. A Turkey that can behave well toward Iraqi Kurds - and

Taiwan Strait: Look Back and Learn the Lessons

T OKYO — Just over 30 years ago, in the summer of 1958, the world faced nuclear war over a clash in the Taiwan Strait between Beijing and the rival Nationalist govern-ment in Taipei. This summer thousands of Taiwanese citizens visited China freely for the first time. Taiwanese fishing boats elandestinely trade in and out of Chinese ports. Peace has broken out in yet moth-er corner of the globe, but this time the implications are far more important than Iran-Iraq or Angola.

In his recent memoirs, President Andrei Gromyko, the former Soviet foreign minister, has said that Beijing engineered the Taiwan Strait clash to induce a U.S. Invasion of the Chinese mainland which Moscow was supposed to crush with nuclear weapons. Many Chinese would die, but in the process America would be humiliated.

The Gromyko account is somewhat fanciful, but the true story is just as alarming. The crisis began with Beijing's bombardment of Na-nonalist-held islands near the Chinese coast, in a bid to weaken the Nationalists and reinforce Beijing's claim to the true government of China. The United States then told Beijing through secret diplomatic channels that any threat to the islands, not to mention Taiwan itself, would be met with nuclear retaliation. Beijing turned to Moscow for the nuclear support it believed it was entitled to under the then existing Chinese-Soviet alliance. The Soviets declined, reasonably enough, on the grounds that they had little interest in risking a ouclear war with the United States simply to weaken Taiwan. Beijing was forced into a bumiliating back-down. The seeds of the sown, and Beijing began its long period of isolationist policies which were to climax in the immeasely damaging Cultural Revolution.

By Gregory Clark should all learn to handle civil war for so long Taiper's claims to be the legitimate government of China. It Beijing's hostility to Taiwan back in 1958 is understandable. The Chishould have accepted the fact of Communist victory in the Chinese civil war. But it should have added nese Communists had in 1949 won a long and bitter civil war against a that for humanitarian reasons it would protect Taiwan, to allow the losers in the civil war to reflect on past mistakes and negotiate their foture with the winning side.

Beijing would have complained bitterly. But with its own legitimacy recognized, it would not have felt it had to force that fateful confrontation in the Taiwan Strait of 1958. Decades of hatred, suffering and the risk of ouclear war would have been avoided. And Taiwan would probahly have been in exactly the same favorable position as it is today. In Vietnam, too, the formola would have worked wonders. When it was clear that Saigon lacked the will to save itself, the West should have intervened simply to create an en-clave in South Vietnam - an onshore Taiwan - where the anti-Communists could regroup, reorganize and think about their future. But that may not be the whole story. It is wrong to think of Haitian politics in modern terms. Haiti has no effective government and has had none for years. It has reverted to a much older pattern. That key is elections, and a return to the constitution. The armed bands resist it as a threat to their activities. #### Independent but Barbaric

The plight of Haiti seems almost to establish a case for old-fashioned colonialism. Since its early independence from France in 1804 [it] has made almost oo progress under a succession of harharic and picturesque rulers. The United States must think carefully before resuming the aid suspended when General Namphy seized power — a policy which so far has merely lowered the living standards of most Haidans withoot appreciably advancing democracy's cause.

The South Korean Example

The world will be looking at Seoul in the same light as at Tokyo when it hosted the 1964 Olympics: as a new power tising, a nation reborn. The moves last year toward popular participation were not destabilizing: They have, in fact, boosted South Korea's stability, enabling [it] to focus on de-velopment. South Korea's economic and political paths may serve increasingly as an inspiration to other Asian nations, such as Burma, struggling toward lasting change. The Korean example challenges the assumption of too many outside the developing world that ruthless autocratic rule is a occessary adjunct to rapid economic growth.

At the time, few Western strategists realized that the Chinese-Soviet dispute had begun with this simple clash of national interest. Most saw it as an ideological battle between modcrate Soviet Communists and extremist Chinese Communists. This in turn provided the ideological justification for Western intervention in Vietnam -- to counter extremist Asian communism - and for the diplomatie embargo on Beijing. And so the Cold War became firmly embedded in Asia. But for the failure of the Vietnam intervention, and the baldness of the Nixon-Kissinger over-tures to Beijing in 1972, Asia today would still be stuck in the marass of East-West confrontation. The remarkable political and economic progress we have seen in the past decade, with even North Korea moving out of isolation, would have been aborted.

The moral in all this? One, that Western strategists should do their homework better. And two, that we

The government presents the war as the great formative event for the Soviet mentality, the drama in which government and people came togeth-er to fend off Hitler. To make this view credible, Stalin's pact with Hitler was explained as follows:

• The pact was an adroit move by Stalin to gain time to prepare for Hitler's inevitable assault. The ploy succeeded, Stalin hoodwinked the Führer, and the Red Army gained two years in which to ready itself.

• The pact was purely defensive. The fact that shortly afterward the Soviet Union annexed Latvia, Lithua-nia, Estonia, parts of the western Ukraine and White Rossia and prov-

The oext day Komsomolskaya Pravda exploded its bombshell with an article by V. M. Kulish, a military historian. He demolished the party challenged a basic myth of Soviet life. The government presents the war as the great formative event for the would Stalin have turned German Communist refugees in Moscow over to the Gestapo? Why would he have let Nazi spics into the country under the guise of seeking the graves of Ger-man soldiers killed in World War I?

The pact, Mr. Kulish wrote, as-sured Hitler's armies a free hand in France and enabled them then to throw their full might against Soviet Russia. Stalin himself made the Russian campaign a one-front war, with all its hloody consequences.

The article also showed Stalin's scheming against the Baltic republics and Poland. Mr. Kulish cited, for the first time in the central Soviet press,

By Jay Mathews Post Service SAN DIEGO - Perhaps beause they were so often ignored in life, it look a long time to notice the odd similarity of their deaths. The remains of young women from Seattle's red light districts began to be found in rural fields and woods near thoroughfares in Washington in 1982. The first five discovered had heen strangled. Most of the next 35 bodies, including four found in Oregon, were too decomposed to determine the cause of death. Eight more missing Seattle-area women are also thought to have been victims of the Green River Killer, named for the area

The self-imposed anonymity of the women, their estrangement from their families and the assumed names that bespeak their involvement with drugs or prostitution have impeded identification. Their initial disappearances often went unnoticed. Detectives had only cold trails to follow.

Investigators said the skeleton was that of Debra Lorraine Estes, who was last seen Sept. 20. 1982. She was 15 at the time, and had an arrest record for prostitution.

The first similar San Diego kuling was that of Donna Marie Gen-tile, 22, a prostitute. She had been a witness in a city civil-service commission case in which police were charged with receiving sexual favors in exchange for warning pros-titutes about planned arrests. She had been strangled and gravel had been jammed down her throat. Nine other San Diego victims have been found with characteristics similar to the Seattle-area omen.

Some experts believe that at least 50 serial killers are at large in the United States at any one time. But Robert Keppel, chief criminal investigator for the Washington state attorney general's office said he considers that figure conservative, citing the number of missing-person reports filling police files and the unidentified skeletons found regularly nationwide.

The lowest infection rate - zero in a sample of 37 — was recorded in southern Nevada, where prostitation is legal and regulated. Screening of prostitutes by health officials there yielded only about five AIDS infections out of more than a thousand tests. Joyce I. Wallace, a doctor who uses a van to recruit Manhattan streetwalkers for testing and who also tests their customers, said that about 9 percent of 199 prostitutes

In that survey, 188 of 1,486 prostitutes, or 13 percent, tested posi-tive for the AIDS virus. Slightly more than half the group, 757, acknowledged or showed signs of drug use. Of them, 150 tested positive for the AIDS virus - a rate of 21 percent

But among the remaining 729 who denied injecting drugs and had no signs of drug use, only 38, or 5 percent, were infected. Some of those said they knew or believed that their sex partners were intravenous drug users.

Rather than heing disease spreaders, prostitutes are more likely to get AIDS than to give it, the studies indicate.

Washington Past Service TOKYO - Japan began to brace Tuesday for the ending of an era after reports that Emperor Hirobito, 87, had taken a severe turn for the worse,

According to Imperial Palace officials, Hirohito began vomiting blood and showing other signs of internal bleeding late Monday night and again Tuesday morning

He was quickly given transfo-sions to stem the blood loss but. apparently sensing the worst, imporial family members and officials ashed to the palace in the middle of the night as Japanese television networks began a live, nonstop vigil at the palace gates. Hirohito has been visibly frail since last year, when he was operated on for what palace doctors said was pancreatitis but what was widely conjectured at the time to be pancreatic or liver cancer.

In the last few months, Hirohito had grown quite thin and suffered several bouts of fever that palace doctors said were a result of a cold or, just last week, possibly an infection of the digestive tract. Recently, he also began to show signs of jaun-dice, which is frequently a sympsom of liver failure. One of Japan's top cancer specialists said Tuesday that Hirobi-to's symptoms — bleeding and jaundice — indicated that his discase had reached an "extremely critical" stage and that it was un-likely he could last much longer.

"Indeed," she continued, "it is ironic that just when those countries such as the Soviet Union, which have tried to run everything from the center, are learning that success depends on dispersing power and decisions away from the center, some in the community seem to want to move in the opposite direction."

Mrs. Thatcher's comments were taken in Brussels as intended as a further riposte to Jacques Delors, president of the community's Exec-utive Commission, who has said that 80 percent of national economic policy could have "a European dimension" within the next 10 years and called for discussion of a potential European government.

Urging a practical, step-by-step approach to European coopera-tion, Mrs. Thatcher said Europeans could not afford to waste their encreics on "internal disputes or ar-

Whatever the cause of Hirohito's worsening condition, most Japanese, from government officials to citizens, had clearly concluded by Tuesday that the tumultuons "Showa," or "bright hannony," era, which was officially named for Hirohito the day he ascended to the Chrysanthemum throne 62 years ago, was drawing to a close. "It's very sad," said Miki Tanaka, 57, who stood before a palace gate praying for the emperor, with a radio tuned to hear the hourly broadcasts of his condition. "There seems to be no sign of recovery."

Although Japanese no longer look upon Hirohito as a "living god," a title he renounced with Japan's defeat at the end of World War II, he nonetheless remains a symbol for many, particularly old-er Japanese, of the history they too lived through: prewar empire, wartime collapse and postwar poverty. recovery and miraculous prosperi-

Show Dates For Fashion

International Herald Tribe LONDON - The heads of the British, French and Italian fashion industries have resolved the conflict of dates for the shows in March.

The Milan ready-to-wear shows for autumn and winter will open on March 5 and will run for five days. The London shows and exhibition will follow on March 10-14. The Paris designer shows will be held from March 15 to 22.

The dates were decided at a meeting on Monday, hosted by the British Fashion Council, under its chairman Sir Edward Rayne. The French delegation was headed by Jacques Mouclier, president-elect of the Fédération Française de la Conture and of the ready-to-wear high fashion designers. Loris Abate, president of the Camera Nazionale Dell'Alta Moda Italiana, led the Italian team, which included Beppe Modenese of Milan.

Dates for October 1989 are still not finalized, although Denise Dubois, press attaché for the French hante conture industry, confirmed that the Paris shows will begin on Oct. 18. The Italians and British have to decide whether to schedule around that date or whether to have earlier shows as both industries would prefer.

Meetings will now be held regu-larly with the next one to take place in June 1989 in Paris. - SUZY MENKES

Keene at City Opera: Together at Midlife

By Donal Henahan

New York Times Service TEW YORK - The New York City NOpera's recent announcement that Christopher Keene would replace Beverly Sills as general-director after this season came as a mild surprise, though hardly a shock

Though some observers had hoped that the board of trustees might choose a career ad-ministrator who would share reponsibility with an artistic director, rather in the style of the Metropolitan Opera's team of Bruce Crawford and James Levine, that was not in the cards. Perhaps no qualified opera administrator was available at this time for transfer to New York, or perhaps Keene had the inside track all the while. We may never know.

However, with hindsight it is possible to see the 41-year-old conductor's appointment as one that follows a tradition of City Opera, which has throughout its history been under the control of artists, not professional manag-CL2

Since its first season in 1944, the company has had five general directors, four of them conductors: Laszlo Halasz, Joseph Rosen-stock, Erich Leinsdorf and Julius Rudel. The fifth, Sills, was one of the great sopranos of her time before retiring to take over direction of the troupe in 1979.

But control by artists is a City Opera tradition, not a universal rule. Opera companies have been run successfully both by performing artists (Edward Johnson at the Metropolitan, Kurt Herbert Adler in San Francisco, John Crosby in Santa Fe, Sarah Caldwell in Boston, among others) and by professional administrators (Sir Rudolf Bing at the Met, Richard Gaddes in St. Louis, David Gockley in Houston). So, history is not a useful forecaster of Keene's success.

caster of Kerne's success. The general director-designate brings a fat sheaf of credentials to the job. From the first he has been an adepl organizer, his public debut coming in Berkeley in 1965, when he led a performance of Britten's "Rape of Lu-cretia" with an opera company that he himself organized

In 1968 Gian Carlo Menotti chose him to conduct "The Saint of Bleecker Street" at the Spoleto Festival in Italy. The next year he won the first Julius Rudel Award for young conductors and became music director of the Eliot Feld ballet company.

In 1972, his international career took a leap when Menotti named him co-director (with Thomas Schippers) of Spoleto. From 1977 to 1980, he directed the Spoleto U.S.A. Festival in Charleston, South Carolina. In 1974, he was named music director of the Artpark summer festival in Lewiston, New York, and given the title of president in 1985. He was music director of the Syracuse Symphony from 1975 to 1984. Keene was named music supervisor of the of administrative duties. That reason did not sound entirely plausible then and, in light of responsibilities he must soon assume, seems even stranger now. The reports of tempera-mental and artistic conflicts with Sills, denied at the time of his leaving, must be given new credibility.

Still, Keene's career certainly testifies to his abundant energies and great organizains animolani energies and great organiza-tional skills. At Artpark, he managed to put together Wagner's "Ring" on a shoestring budget, partly with borrowed sets. He has been exceptionally alert to new music. It was Keene who introduced Sills to the was for the mater "Beamain" the

the work of Jay Reise, whose "Rasputin" the company subsequently commissioned and presented in its first performance Saturday

Unfortunately, as the City Opera's sixth general director, he will drag along some weighty baggage. He has had a reputation for arrogance and lack of tact in dealing with orchestras that more administrative responsibility may or may not temper. His performances, moreover, often have been incomprehensibly graceless, hard-driv-en and, when not actually crude, seemingly more concerned with getting the job done than with subtleties.

So, it would be one more surprise if the City Opera's board were under the impression that Keene's talents are indispensable in the orchestra pit. More likely, it was his youthful outlook and his sympathy for contemporary opera that made him an attractive

In any event, the appointment comes at a pivotal period in Keene's life, a time when a few artists mature and blossom while others, the great majority, begin to suffer from shriv-eling expectations, chronic emmi and loss of

There still seems to me something curious about the way that the London critical and arts estabishment persistently falls over itself to wel-come anything new from the Continent, while relegating the wealth of current Aus-tralian drama to a kind of outback.

Soon to leave Chichester and make its way to the West End, Elijah Moshinsky's rare revival of the Jean Anouilh-Christopher Fry "Ring Round the Moon" is a flaccid affair, fatally flawed by the coziness of the central casting. That is more than a little sad, because what we have here, in all of 52 scenes, is an urban nightmare of the Sydney subway that looks as though Caryl Churchill's "Serious Money" has been relocated in Fritz Lang's "Metropolis." A cast of 12 led by Philip Madoc and Nyree Dawn Porter wend their way through a labyrinthine plot about bank-rupt banks and murderons drug-dealers and bland production. But this production is worth seeing for the British stage debut of José Ferrer, in wonderful form as the ancient millionaire, and for June Whitfield as the dancer's socially ambitious mother. It also raises all manner of questions about Chichester's future as it moves into a new era with a new (though as yet unappointed) director and a new studio theater across from the main house. Now more than ever, Chichester needs a director of flair and vision and dramatic experience: Now, therefore, would surely be the moment to invite John Neville back from a long Canadian exile to a theater that he, more than any other director or actor of his generation, is qualified to program and run.

EW YORK - Six months after its new owner promised to tone down The New York Post's sensationalism, the newspaper said that four of New York's most Bloomingdale's, Saks Fifth Avenue, Bergdorf Goodman and B. Altman will begin scheduled advertising in The Post during the week of Oct. 3, said Peter O. Price, the newspaper's publisher. All the ads will run on the paper's seventh page, opposite one of the Post's most popular features, "Page Sir," which offers celebrity and society gossip. "The retailers are confirming what we said we'd be able to do - reposition the paper in a short time to take out some of the lurid elements that were of-discounts, would cost around $5,000, that schedule is too meager to add significantly to the paper's revenue. But the prominent positioning of ads from such prestige-laden stores represents a dramatic advance in the paper's effort to re-establish its credibil-ity with the New York department stores. The new advertising will include general merchandise, ranging from cut-price cosmetics to full-price men's and women's clothing and accessories.

The vice president for sales promotion administration at Bergdorf, Mitchell B. Fox, refused to confirm Mr. Price's announce-ment. Executives at the other stores said they would begin advertising in two weeks.

E XECUTIVES at several of the stores said they had been impressed by editorial changes instituted by Mr. Price and Jane Amsterdam, a former magazine editor who became

The Post's editor three months ago. "More and more Pm hearing from my friends that they are reading The New York Post, and my friends are our customers," said Lester Gribetz, Bloomingdale's executive vice president. He cited particularly the addition of Jeane Kirkpatrick, the former U.S. representative at the United Nations, as a syndicated columnist, as well as the reduction in "shocking" headlines. Retail executives also said they had been attracted by the elimination of "Wingo" and other games that artificially inflated The Post's circulation, to a high of 960,000. The circulation had dropped to less than half a million at the time Mr. Kalikow i purchased the paper but has since climbed back to 600.000. Mr. Price said.

The Post's retail advertising also has begun to rebound. It was down by nearly 40 percent in the first quarter of 1988 from the year before and "had all but disappeared," Mr. Price said, He added that most of that loss had been recovered.

But while retail executives said they were giving a vote of confidence to The Post, they added that they intended to test to determine whether the paper delivered its readers. "We will advertise merchandise in the Post that is not the same as in The New York Times," said Paul Leblang, the senior vice president for marketing at Saks Inc. "If we have 'Brand X' of a men's suit in the Times, we'll have 'Brand Y' in The Post. Then we'll try to take a look at the results at the New Loncho said it has been advised that stock purchases by Mr. Edel-man are continuing. The disclosure follows three weeks of musually beavy trading in Lonrho stock, with hints from the company that a U.S. purchaser might be behind it. Lonrho said in a statement that the tinusual activity in its stock since Sept. 5 had been handled mainly by two London brokers on behalf of Hentsch & Compagnie, a Geneva-based Swiss bank. The company said that it is mak-ing further inquiries into the fund-ing and ultimate ownership and control of Mr. Edelman's holding, and there was no indication late Tuesday of the arbitrager's immediate intentions. Market sources said before Lonrico's announcement that the buying party is believed to have built up about a 5 percent stake in the group, a level that must be disclosed under British takeover rules. Lonrho jumped to the top of the active list on the London Stock Exchange before the disclosure. It touched a day's high of 292 peace ($4.90) but eased to close at 290 pence, compared with 269.5 pence Monday, when investors decided that the stake builder did not appear to be a potential bidder for the group, dealers said

New York Times Service SHANNON, Ireland — Thirteen years ago, Tony Ryan was a middle-level manager at Aer Lingus, Ireland's state-owned airline. When he left to start his own business, with $5,000 in savings, colleagues thought him foolish for giving up a steady if modest salary and a secure future.

Today, largely because of the tremendous growth of the aircraft-leasing business and his success in building GPA Group Ltd. into the world leader in the industry, Mr. Ryan's personal weahth stands at an estimated $200 million, making him one of Ireland's richert people and one of in best. one of Ireland's richest people and one of its bestknown business executives.

Mr. Ryan, 52, lives on a 300-acre estate in Tipperary, where be raises cattle and maintains an impressive collection of 19th- and 20th-century paintings. Recently, he has become perhaps the top-private patron of the arts in Ireland, financing Incrative prizes for artists, anthors and musicians, The wealth and its trappings have been Mr. Ryan's reward for being a pioneer in aincraft leasing.

"The leasing industry has come of age," Mr. Ryan said recently in his Tipperary office. "Leasing is now part of the fabric of the aviation industry."

As leasing has entered the mainstream, GPA has profited handsomely. Since 1984, the company's net income has jumped more than eightfold, to $101.3 million in the year ended last March. Over the same period, revenue has increased more than Even Mr. Ryan acknowledges that he did not foresee how lucrative leasing was to become. But more than a decade ago, he did see the direction. Deregulation and increased competition internationally have meant that many aidines prefer to charter carriers, mainly based in Britain, that have proliferated during the 1980s and now account for 65 percent of Europe's total air traffic. The competitive turnoil in the industry has also made leasing more attractive to established airlines. Some are so financially pinched that they cannot finance their own fleet-upgrading pro-grams. But others, even hig well-healed carners, choose to lease some of their planes for the flexibility it gives them.

The average life of an aircraft is at least 20 years; airline planning cycles are typically five years. Once, airlines could plan for certain levels of assenger traffic at given prices years in advance with considerable confidence. But not anymore. The practice of leasing aircraft has been around

NEW YORK - A lawyer reased a letter to Lafarge Coppee

seased a lefter to Large Copper SA on Tuesday that said an inves-tor group wanted to buy its 57 percent stake in Lafange Corp, for $30 a share, but the French compa-ny said it was not interested and analysis said they did not take the effectively said they did not take the offer sectionsity. Stock in Lafarge Corp., one of the largest North American makers of cement and building materials, rose $1.625 to $19.625 a share on the New York Stock Evolution the New York Stock Exchange. The stock had been halted earlier in the day in connection with the letter and Lafarge's response, and there had been indications of demand at up to $27 a share.

But it reopened at $19.75, as analysts and traders questioned the Lafarge Coppée owns about 57 percent of Lafarge Corp.'s 49 mil-lion fully diluted shares. Lawrence F. Orbe 3d, the lawyer, said the investor group holds a small amount of Lafarge stock. He added that their stake was less than the 5 percent level that would require an informational filing with the Secon-ties and Exchange Commission.

He would not provide further de-tails about the clients but said their offer was contingent upon obtaining federal antitrust clearance, sufficient financing and no opposition from the board of Lafarge Copple, a Paris-based cement producer. "For now, the feeling is we want to meet with the parent company to disclose the backgrounds of the principals," Mr. Orbe said. "That's the most appropriate way." It was the second time this month that the group had approached La-farge Copper about selling the com-pany. The earlier offer, also for $30 share, was only for the French parent's controlling interest. The letter said "to the extent that you believe that discussions with us would be fruitful in identifying greater values, we are willing to meet with you to discuss the modimeet with you to ascuss the modi-fication of our proposal." A $30-per-share bid would value Lafarge Corp. at about $1.5 billion. In Reston, Virginia, Lafarge Corp. said that there was disseminated over wire services "yet another" unsolicited letter to Lafarge Copple from a lawyer who put ports to represent an unidentifi group of Lafarge stockholders.

It said the French company was not interested in selling any of its (Reuters, AP)

The dollar rose to 134.075 yen at the close, from 133.575 at Monday's close.

However, it declined to 1.8668 Deutsche marks from 1.8678 and to 1.5765 Swiss francs from 1.5783. The U.S. currency also cased to 6.3465 French francs from 6.3480, while the British pound advanced to $1.6810 from Monday's $1.6785.

Dealers said trading was rela-tively quiet ahead of meetings of the Group of Seven industrialized nations, the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank in West Berlin.

Bundesbank Chief Says Inflation Fears Fading

By Hobart Rowen Washington Post Service WASHINGTON — Karl Otto Pohl, president of the Bundesbank, said Tuesday that inflationary expectations that had troubled world financial markets earlier this year have begun to fade, thanks to the co-ordinated effort of central bankers to tighten interest rates. Lawson Relaxed on Forex

LONDON - Nigel Lawson, the British chancellor of the Excha-quer, said Tuesday he is comfortable with current exchange rates, including that of the British pound. Asked during a press briefing about exchange rates among the Group of Seven industrialized countries, Mr. Lawson said, "I think most of us are comfortable with the rates that there are at the present time." Asked later if that applied to sterling, he said it did. The pound closed at $1.6845 in London on Tuesday and ended at about 3.14 DM. The dollar closed at 1.8645 Deutsche marks.

"The dollar/Dentsche mark rate is bang in the Louvre range now," Mr. Lawson said, referring to the values agreed ti by the industrialized countries at a February 1987 meeting in the Louvre.

The Louvre Accord ranges have not been made public. "As far as the dollar/yen range is concerned," said Mr. Lawson, "the yen is now higher, but I think that is wholly appropriate with the lapanese economy's performance," he said.

He added that he thought West Germany, at the time of the Louvre agreement, would have liked to have seen the yen "a little bit higher" against the mark, "so I think there is general satisfaction." Speaking before his departure for the Berlin meetings, Mr. Lawson said that international economic cooperation is working very well. The recent wave of interest rate increases had been wholly appropriate in both national and international terms, he said.

GPA would lease surplus planes from established carriers and release them to airlines in the Third World. Back then, the likes of Nigerian Airways and Air Lanka, Sri Lanka's airline, were GPA's biggest customers.

But the picture has changed drastically since then. Leasing companies are among the largest purchasers of new aircraft, and manufacturers compete for their purchases, offering hefty discounts. GPA currently has orders for and options to buy 322 new aircraft worth $8 billion from manufactur-

GPA's client list has also been transformed in recent years. Small and medium-size airlines still represent the majority of GPA's customers, but increasingly the major carriers are leasing some planes to give them additional flexibility. The company's current roster of 63 customers includes British Airways, Trans World Airlines, Scandinavian Airlines System, Air Canada, Pan American World Airways and Finnair.

As in so many entrepreneurial success stories, chance played an important role in introducing Mr. Ryan to a market opportunity, hich he saw and seized

If purchasing planes is the art of the leasing business, the science of the business is the constant juggling of the planes in one's fleet. The average lease on GPA planes runs for just over six years, and its planes are regularly coming

French press reports said computer problems and unauthorized transactions by dealers accounted for some of the backlog.

It should be possible to rapidly settle two-thirds of the transactions, mostly small deals worth a total of about 2 billion francs, the Bourse association said.

ment on the competing Kohlberg. Kravis offer. Kroger stock soared after the Kohlberg, Kravis announcement, closing at $56.25 a share, up $3.50 from Monday in New York Stock Exchange composite trading.

Herbert and Robert Haft, the father and son who head Dart Group, have made millions as corporate raiders who bid for companics and later withdraw their offers, selling stakes that have greatly increased in value.

The Hafts have failed in other efforts to buy supermarket compa-mes and retailers. Among the concerns they have targeted are Safeway Stores, Supermarkets General Corp., Stop & Shop Cos. and Dayton-Hudson Corp.

Kroger said it was reviewing the proposal by Kohlberg, Kravis, which it said was unsolicited. The Wall Street concern said the supermarket company had refused to meet over a possible bid.

Elizabeth M. Shiels, an analyst with the investment firm Hilliard Lyons Inc. in Louisville, Kentucky, said the added pressure on Kroger made it likely the company would sell off some of its assets - either as part of the proposed restructur-ing or under new ownership.

Kroger operates more than 1.300 supermarkets, 935 convenience stores and 15 membership warehouses in 29 states. It also processes a variety of food products for sale in its retail stores and to outside customers. (Renters AP)

By Steve Lohr New York Times Service LONDON - After three years on the sidelines, Edmond J. Safra, the reclusive billionaire banker, has returned to his Geneva stronghold and his favorite field of private banking from Switzerland - providing exclusive banking services to the rich. International private banking is nothing new to Mr. Safra, 56, whose banking roots go back five generations, to the time when his family beloed finance the Ottoman Empire's caravan trade. With Edmond Salra in the lead, the family of Lebanese-born Jews now controls banks worldwide that are known for captious dealing and secrecy. They include institutions in Switzerland, Brazil, Italy, Monte Carlo, France, Luxembourg and Florida. Most of the banks are privately held, but Mr. Safra is also the founder and largest shareholder in the Republic National Bank of New York, in which he holds a onethird stake. "Edmond Safra heads a banking dynasty," noted Mark Alpert, an analyst for Bear, Stearns & Co. "But the Safra name is far better known in Europe than in the U.S."

Edmond J. Safra

The pull of the Safra name in Europe will be crucial to his most recent venture, Safra Republic Holdings SA, a Geneva-based bank holding concern. Founded last March as Republic National Bank of New York (Suisse) SA with $430 million in capital, the renamed Safra Republic announced Tuesday that it plans to raise $450 million in new equity to accelerate its marketing strategy. Mr. Safra declined to be spe-cific about his plans in private banking, but it was clear he does not intend to stray from his cantious approach.

Mr. Safra is reaching into his own pocket for $200 million of the equity. An additional $250 million to $300 million is to come from an international equity offeting to individual and institutional investors, which is expected to be launched in October. The mitial $430 million investment, through Republic National Bank of New York, will remain. It is because of the public offering, and the urging of under-writers, that Mr. Safra departed from his lifetime practice of avoiding the press, and gave four individual interviews on Tuesday. A senior banking associate and a public relations consultant were resent at each session.

"I try to remain unknown as much as possible," Mr. Safra explained.

But in international financial circles, the Safra name is well-known. Much of Mr. Safra's world-wide reputation is based on the extraordinary growth of Trade Development Bank, which he founded in the 1950s with roughly $1 million of his own money, to tap the Swiss privatebanking market. By 1983, when Trade Development Bank had deposits of nearly $5 billion, he sold it to American Express Co. for $550 million. Mr. Safra left in 1985 and agreed not to set up a competing private bank for three VEATS

When the three-year agree-ment expired earlier this year, Mr. Safra established a competing bank. No one was surprised. It is clear that Safra Republic intends to be a formidable competitor in private banking. Its Geneva branch already has deposits of $1 billion and, according to one analyst's estimate, the total assets including Safra Republic's offices ip France, Luxembourg, the Channel Islands and Gibrahar are nearly $2.5 billion.

In the view of Mr. Safra and his principal shareholders, private banking in Europe is ripe for expansion as the European Community moves toward a single market in 1992, and currency controls in most countries are dropped. Caution, confidentiality and service are the hallmarks of the Safra approach.

"You can take a chance in life, but not with a bank," Mr. Safra continued. "A bank is not a playground. Banking is conservatism. And it has been the same for a few thousand years"

Pearson Unit Clyde Petroleum to Buy Newmont Interests 124.17 million shares at 100 pence

Renters LONDON -- Clyde Petroleum PLC, the oil exploration concern, said Tuesday that it plans to buy the Netherlands North Sea oil and gas interests of Newmont Mining Corp. of the United States for $234.3 million. Compiled by Our Staff From Dispatches LONDON - Pearson PLC said

The British company said it Tuesday that Camco Inc., its oil-services unit, agreed to buy the would seek to raise £121 million ($203 million) in a rights issue of stock to fund the purchase.

Newmont's assets represent a prime portfolio of producing proven undeveloped and exploration assets that would bring benefits of scale and geographical spread to Clyde, the oil explorer said. Following the acquisition, its production is to exceed 20,000 barrels a day of oil equivalent into the 1990s, it added.

The purchase would increase Clyde's proven reserves by about 46 percent, and its proven producing reserves by about 76 percent.

the company said. The acquisition and rights issue are conditional on approval by Clyde shareholders at approval by Clyde sharehouders at an Oct. 6 meeting. Clyde is to pay $181.3 million to Newmont for the oil and gas inter-ests and would be responsible for discharging $6.3 million of intra-group habilities; $31.7 million of habilities to Newmont's bankers; and $15 million of tax and other

43.9 percent of its issued share cap-

The oil and gas interests Clyde is buying comprise working interests in 12 offshore Netherlands licenses with substantial proven gas reserves A three-for-four rights issue of and a wide range of prospective exstock will involve the issue of up to ploration acreage, Clyde said.

The major interest is a share of each. Clyde stock eased 10 pence about 4 percent in the six-block on the London Stock Exchange on Tuesday, falling to 118 pence. Joint Development Area operated by NAM, a joint Exxon Corp. and Royal Dutch/Shell Group unit. Clyde stockholders representing The reserves total 260 billion caital have undertaken to subscribe in bic feet of gas and the equivalent of full to the rights issue, and the merchant bank. County NatWest 3 million cubic feet in oil and condensate, according to the Robert-Ltd., has underwritten the balance, son ERC consultancy. Clyde said. Cash flow from the interests was $33.2 million in 1987, while pretax profit to Newmont was $10.8 milion that year. Unaudited accounts put cash flow in the first half of this year at $17.7 million and pretax profit at $5.5 million Cash flow from the purchases would strengthen Clyde's balance sheet with a minimal increase in overhead, and the enlarged group would have the resources to finance a wider exploration program. Newmont already has sold more than $600 million of assets this year to help reduce a heavy debt burden, largely incurred to finance a $33 per share special dividend.

actions ranged from freak result to spends night and day with a ball or easy chances. * As word spread like bushfire, resomplacency, to speculatioo that this is the dawn of African soccer. The first is too glib. When a team outplays its opponent for as long as Zambia did Italy, you cannot insult the performance. You may as well But your head where ostriches bury theirs. The other responses are truer.

Italian players are sometimes congenitally coovinced of their superiority, and sometimes undone by neurosis. At the 1966 World Cup, Italy underestimated North Korea and lost, 1-0, and during the 7982 finals Italy was lucky to draw with Cameroon.

To lose by one goal can be considered careless; to lose by four is to court bumiliation in a big way. We often see Italian talents squandered through arrogance and/or fear. But why blame the loser? It could be that Zamoia had something to do with its astonishing triumpb.

As I wrote after last spring's African Nations Cup, the day of the African was coming. I hadn't expected anything so soon or so grand. But it was obvious in Africa that individual skill born in bush and backstreet, harnessed primarily by European coaching, was closing the

We recommend, you never stretch out in our Slumberettes without asking for a wake-up call.

We may come from the land of clocks but we still believe our First Class travellers deserve to be woken in a rather more gentle manner: by one of our charming flight attendants. Alarm calls are something they're used to making, particularly on our long-haul flights. After all, with a comfortable back rest, reclining seat and flexible footrest, your Slumberette adjusts to your body automatically. In fact, it's the next best thing to your bed at home. However, there is a snag: wouldn't it be a pity to sleep away the luxurious atmosphere and legendary hospitality of our First Class service?

Louganis Turns Near Tragedy Into A Diving Triumph

By Christine Brennan

Washington Past Service SEOUL — With the composure, grace and courage that has made him the world's greatest diver, Greg Louganis turned a horrifying moment into a remarkable triumph Tuesday at the Summer Olympics.

After hitting the back of his head on the board during the preliminary three-meter springboard com-petition oo Monday, Louganis came back with five sutches and dived almost perfectly to win the Olympic gold medal of his career, scoring 730.80 points.

Tan Liangde of China got the silver with 704.88 points and Li Deliang of China took the hronze with 665.28. Albin Killat of West Germany was fourth with 661.47 and Mark Bradshaw, the other American, finished fifth with 642.99. There were 12 men in the final competition after the field had been narrowed from the 35 in the preliminaties.

Louganis was ocver seriously challenged. In his most urying moment, he proved his excellence. A bit unsatisfied with diving at age 28 and anxious to move onto a career of dancing and acting, he rose to the occasion and defended his 1984 two gold. gold medal with ease.

He had broken 700 points only a half-dozen or so times in his career.

Louganis is seeking to become kilos, another with a clean and jerk the first man to win both the springboard and platform events in weight of 342.5 kilos. He held the consecutive Olympics. He captured previous marks of 150 kilos in the his first Olympic medal in 1976 snatch, 188 in the clean and jerk when, at the age of 16, he finished and 335 total. tion. The platform competition in Seoul is scheduled for Monday and Tuesday.

Louganis received no score lower than an 8, and be had only one of those.

He held oearly a nine-point lead over Tan with the six optional dives left in the 11-dive competition, and stretched it to more than 20 points two dives later with a stunning forward 312-somersault pike that earned him two 9.5s, four 9s and one 8.5. Tan, meanwhile, flipped his legs over on a reverse 21/2-somer-sault and received 7.5s and 8s, losing 15 points to Louganis in one

SEOUL - Two Eastern European swimmers set Olympic records on Wednesday in qualifying heats, while Man Biondi of the United States qualified for the 100-meter butterfly final.

butterfly final. Tamas Darnyi of Hungary was clocked in 4:16.55 seconds in the men's 400-meter individual med-ley, eclipsing the Olympic mark of 4:17.41 set by Alex Baumann of Canada in 1984. Darnyi's world record in the individual medley is 4:15.42 4:15.42

Silke Hoerner of East Germany smashed the Olympic mark in the women's 200-meter breaststroke with a time of 2:27.63. She beat the standard of 2:28.94 set in the previous heat by Ioulia Bogatcheva of the Soviet Union. Bogatcheva surpassed the 1980 Olympic record of 2:29.64 by Lina Kachushite of the Soviet Union.

Biondi, meanwhile, performed the neat trick of swimming in one race and qualifying for two finals. Biondi, 22, is swimming in seven Olympic events and is expected to win medals in all of them. On Sunday, in his first final here, he won the bronze medal in the men's 200-meter freestyle. Next on his schedule were the 100-meter butterfly and the 800-meter free-

Tuesday, Bioadi was the second fastest of eight qualifiers for Wednesday's butterfly final. Two hours after that preliminary heat, the United States was the second-fastest qualifier in the freestyle relay. Biondi was not accded to swim in the relay heat, but be will swim in the final. Olympic swimming rules allow such substitutions. It was another shaky day for the U.S. team. Of the eight Americans in the day's four individual races, only Bionch, David Wharton and Mary Wayte qualified comfortably. Two others - Jay Mortenson and Mitzi Kremer - qualified for championship finals, but struggiod. Mortenson's time of 54.44 sec-onds made the butterfly final by only eight-hundredths of a second.

The 10,000 seats in the Olympic Park's 50-meter indoor pool were almost filled when Biondi swam his butterfly heat side by side with Michael Gross of West Germany, the 1984 Olympic champion. Biondi won in 53.46 seconds and Gross was second io the heat and fourth over all in 53.78. The fastest qualifier was Andy Jameson of Britain, in 53.34.

In the 1984 Los Angeles Olympics, no race was more exciting than the 800-meter freestyle relay in which the United States barely caught West Germany for the gold medal. Here, both teams qualified easily. The fastest qualifiers were East Germany in 7:16,61 seconds, the United States in 7:18.76 and West Germany in 7:19,38.

The Uoited States team consisted of Craig Oppel 1:51.24, Dan Jorgensen 1:49.24, Matt Cetlinski 1:48.87 and Doug Gjertsen 1:49.41. In the final, Biondi and Troy Dalbey will replace Oppel 'and Jorgensen.

Biondi is approaching the but-terfly final as calmly as ever, which is remarkable considering the pressure the outside world seems to be putting on him. Many people had been saying he would win seven gold medals, as Mark Spitz did in ... the 1972 Monich Olympics.

Washington Post Service SEOUL - Having just completed his second reverse somersault, Greg Louganis was stretching out for a clean entry into the pool as he had done thousands of times before. But this time there was something terribly wrong. The back of his head smacked onto the board like a melon hitting the sidewalk.

The replay has been inescapable, it's everywhere. Over and over and over again in super slo-mo, so you can't help but wince at the impact. Each time you see it, it hurts a little more. By now everybody in the world must have seen it.

Except Louganis. "Eventually" he'll see it. But not now, and not at the Olympics, Louganis said. "When we're away from here." He knows how many people have seen it, because they're talking about it throughout the athletes' village, "It's overwhelming. Every time I turn around, it's, 'How's your head?'

But he deliberately avoided watching the replay for fear of the psychological impact it might have. "I didn't want that image in my head going into this competition," Longanis said shortly after winning the gold medal in the springboard competition. "From my perspective, I jumped off the board and heard a big clank. That's all | know. I didn't want the visual image of seeing me hit my head."

Talk about playing hurt? About perfor-

ing his scalp together - and without missing cident than from the more serious one nine a turn - came back amid thunderous ap- years earlier. plause and nailed his next dive straight as a stick. Tuesday afternoon, with five permanent stitches in his head and a shaved patch on his crown the size of a six-iron divot, he on the platform. It was easy to block it out, won the gold medal breezing. Going into his because I didn't remember the pain. A lot of last dive, he was far enough ahead that all he had to do to win was hit the water before he cause you remember the pain. This was also hit anything else. He made it look easy. But, more difficult because Tan Liangde," the of course, it was anything but.

"I was scared going into the final," Lou-ganis said in his shy way. "When I hit my head on the board it shook my confidence a lot. I took extra dives in my morning workout. I needed to get over the jitters." One of the dives on which he took extra practice was the villainous reverse 2½ somersault in the pike position. "I made sure to push way out," he said, grinning in embar-rassment. "The first few, I was out in the middle of the pool."

This was not Louganis's first brush with the board. He was on the ladder and heard the thud at the 1983 World University Games when the Soviet diver Sergei Chali-bashvili was killed when he crashed into the platform during a 31/2 reverse tuck; Louganis did the same dive that night in the preliminaries and the next night in the finals. In 1979, Louganis hit a platform, knocking mance under pressure? On Monday night, himself unconscious for 20 minutes. Interest-after cutting his head on his minth dive, ingly, he felt it was more difficult to come Louganis, with four temporary stitches hold-back from Monday's relatively harmless in-

"In 1979, 1 didn't finish the contest, so I didn't have to get right back up there," he said. "I also don't remember hitting my head silver medalist from China, who is Louganis's chief rival, "is a very difficult diver to beat. I couldn't afford to be down physically or psychologically. This was a very big vic-tory for me."

No one had to tell the crowd when Louganis's ninth dive came up. Perhaps because of what had happened the night before there was the sense that people were holding their breaths a little more than usual until each diver cleared the board. But they could be heard sucking in air when Louganis elimbed the ladder.

"I was nervous,' he said. "I'm not going to deny that. I felt everyone would be watching closely. I tried not to wait around and think about it. 1 told myself, 'Just go.' " It wasn't one of his best, but it was more than good enough. "Whew!" he said to him-self as he entered the water, feeling ever so relieved.

This was Louganis's third Olympic gold medal. He's won everything there is to win in his sport, and won it more than once. He's the greatest diver, all time, no question. He's Babe Ruth. He has represented his sport, his country and himself with an elegant bashful ness and an unfailing pleasantness for more than a decade. He isn't in it for the money, he doesn't hold up the flip-flops after the dive and say, "Buy these." He's as close to an artist as sport permits, and it's hard to think of a more admirable athlete. But on Tuesday he was scared. We know other athletes get scared, hnt how many have the courage to break the senseless lockerroom macho taboo and admit it?

"It's not the first time I've talked about my fears," he said, patiently explaining that "in 1984, in New Zealand I landed flat on a dive, Because of the lighting 1 got lost in the dive, and I didn't want to compete there anymore. I was afraid that if I did the dive again and landed that I did the dive again and landed flat, I'd lose the dive forever. I didn't compete because of fear. I talked to my coach, and he said I shouldn't try to weased out of it and say I was sick — I should he honest about it. So I was. And when the story appeared, kids would come up to me and say, '1 really appreciate you saying that. I'm afraid, too.'

He sat as still as fine wine, the gold medal around his neck, and said, for the whole world to hear: "Fears aren't bad."

Matt Biondi of the United States, bottom, who is still on course for seven medals, won his 100-meter butterfly heat as Silke Hoerner of East Germany set an Olympic mark in the women's 200-meter breaststroke Hungary's Milaly Kovacs was sandwiched between three Korean players he tried to get rid of the ball during a bandball contest."

will ("It was easy for me t' cry - all I hadda do wi think of home"); and in 1926 everything came togethe for her when Schulberg cast her as the heroine of Elino

$50,000 --- and after the movie's success she was invoc cably "the 'It' Girl."

Part of her appeal, as Stenn says, was that she wa the first star in Hollywood who showed that it wa possible to be highly sexed and unmistakably, healthil American at one and the same time. The "It" girl wa also, in her own words, "jest a wolkin' goil." (Sten reproduces all his quotations from her in the origina Brooklynese.)

Off screen she chewed gum, peppered her conversa-tion with cheerful profanities and got on well with most of the people she worked with. She furnished her house with bold abandon, and amused herself by roller skating up and down her driveway.

Then there were men. Gilbert Roland. The directo Victor Fleming, half lover, half father-figure. Gar Cooper. The horribly boastful entertainer Harry Rich man. There were many others, too, although Stem convincingly rejects the more hurid rumors that hav become attached to her name.

It is often assumed that her career was destroyed by the coming of the talkies. The truth, Stenn shows, wa more complicated. While her voice created problems and the studio did nothing to help, she went on makin films; they were not very good films, but she hersel was generally well received. She died in 1965.

Chicago seemed redolent of the adventure marking the history of Canada's far north. But in Captain Henry Oakley and the 12-man crew of the Jock McNiven, a 780-ton vessel that pushes barges laden with the fuel and equipment needed to sustain life in the Far North, the sights along the river are little more than distance markers on the long voyage to the sea.

"When you've been up and down this river a few dozen times, it's all pretty familiar," said Oakley, 54. Since be started as a deckhand on river boats, he has had 33 years of experience, 17 of them as a captain on the Mackenzie River.

A 2,635-mile (4,300-kilometer) nibbon of cold, murky water that flows northward through the for-ests and nundra of the Canadian Arctic, the Mackenzie and two rivers that feed it, the Peace and the Finlay, form the longest continu-ous water flow in North America after the Mississippi River system.

Like the Mississippi in an earlier age, the Mackenzie plays a crucial role in a vast, largely unpopulated area - 1.3 million square miles of resource-rich land and water, the Northwest Territories.

But barge traffic on the Mackenzie, too, was down sharply from the when John Diefenbaker, then highs recorded earlier in the decade, largely because of freight cutbacks associated with the decline in oil and gas exploration in the Cana- and gas exploration in the early dian Arctic resulting from low 1970s, repeated in the early 1980s world prices.

barges take on almost all of the Arctic's fuel — millions of gallons of aviation kerosene, specially treated diesel fuel that stays liquid down to 60 degrees below zero, the bunker oils that fuel power generators and gasoline for everything from snowmobiles to the longboats used for Eskimo whale hunts.

ALTHOUGH Northern Transportation has a virtual monopoly in all three of its major operating ar-eas — the 1,100-mile voyage down the Mackenzie from the company's northern terminus at Hay River, Northwest Territories; east and west along the Arctic coastline from Tuktoyaktuk, where the Mac-kenzie meets the Arctic Ocean, and

By Paul Delaney New York Times Service I ISBON — The fire began in a department store and quickly spread through the historic Chiado district, a neighborhood of steep, narrow streets. When it was over 10 hours later, much of the district was rubble and twisted steel. Stone and marble facades, tilting cerily, were guarded by fire fighters and the police for fear that they might topple on passers-by. The fire, which began on Aug. 25, was the city's worst disaster since an earthquake de-stroyed much of the downtown in 1755. The blaze destroyed the chic shopping district. Lisbon's equivalent of Fifth Avenue or Bond Street. Famous old shops and businesses along Rua do Carmo and Rua Garrett, which survived the earthquake or were rebuilt afterward, were gone.

Two persons were killed, 18 commercial buildings were burned out, and 40 businesses, most with little or no insurance, were destroyed. The fire left 300 people homeless and 2,000 more jobless, and it caused $350 million in damag It also left the country stunned, as though in mourning. The fire has set off a debate over why it was so destructive. Fire fighters said they were bindered by new benches, huge flower urns and sidewalk cafes in the area.

And there is controversy over how to rebuild, whether to recreate the Chiado of old or design and build a more modern district.

"The fire presents a very good opportunity to change the area, to make it exemplary, a model," said Concalo Byrne, an architect. Emotions run deep over the fire. Weeks after the devastation, tears streamed down the face of a woman as she looked at the charred remains. She said she had worked in one of the shops. A distraught shopkeeper said the govern-ment had given her a temporary site to do business, but she said she missed her old shop's "expensive mirrors and wood paneling and ambiance."

hazards.

"How can these be replaced?" she said. Among the things lost to the blaze were Casa Batalha, a 17th-century jewelry store that was one of the oldest shops in the city, and an extraordinary collection of early Portuguese music at the Valentim de Carvalho music store. Byrne and others interviewed, including officials and private citizens, want Chiado rebuilt as quickly as possible, but they say they are concerned about the disagreements over how to do it. Officials say construction should begin within a year.

Residents of the area are still dehating more immediate points: The cause of the blaze, the reasons for its rapid spread, the timing of the first alarm and the quality of fire prevention and protection in Chiado and throughout the city.

PEOPLE Gala for French Dance

Everyone from Vaslav N grandson to Viola Fart American choreographer i one of Merce Cunninghan partners, showed up on st gala to celebrate "Four C of Dance in France," the theme of the current International Dance Biennale in Lyon. The 300-strong international gathering of French dance personalities and critics from Europe, Canada and the United States has joined with the mayor of Lyon, Francisque Collomb for the event. Guy Darmer is the festival's director. The gala featured stars such as Sylvie Guillem and Patrick Dupond and past stars including Jean Bablice, chairman of the event. The gala began with a per-formed solo by Jean-Christophe Paré of the Paris Opera Ballet. Francine Lancelot, the Baroque dance expert, reconstructed this "Entree d'Apollon."

Francia Ford Coppola has accept-ed an invitation to be president of the jury at the 1989 International Film Festival at Cannes. The American movie director is the only director to have twice received the Cannes "Golden Palm" prize, which he was awarded for Conversation" in 1974 and for "Apocalypse Now," in 1979.

More than 75,000 people attend-ed the first concert in the United States of the worldwide tour to call attention to Annesty International's fight for human rights. "You have the opportunity to use your freedom to help free others," said Bruce Springsteen, the closing act at Monday's sold-out performance at John F. Kennedy Stadium. Join-ing Springsteen were Sting, Peter Gabriel, Tracy Chapman, the Sene-galese singer Yousoon N'Dour, the folk singer Joan Baez and the saxophonist Branford Marsalis.
